

Abstract:

Patient dose measurements in diagnostic radiology are conducted for common and specialized radiological procedures.

The Objective of this study is to obtain a range of radiation doses received by patients undergoing diagnostic radiology examinations in Lebanon, to investigate the variability of patient doses in relation to x-ray equipment used to compare the results with international guidance levels and to implement corrective actions to reduce doses.