

In 2007 after careful consideration, the American Association of Physicists in Medicine (AAPM) Board of Director's (BOD) directed the current licensure effort and committed funding. This effort has been progressing steadily for three years and made significant progress. This update will cover:

- The background and experience of the licensure effort by the AAPM and the American College of Medical Physicists (ACMP)
- Important changes in the Federal legislative climate influencing the issue of licensure
- Status of the licensure effort in selected
